Dear Larry

You'll be interested in knowing that the dictionary materials you helped create this spring are being read loud and clear by the visual scanner and that the editing phase of the project will soon be under way.

We want you to know that your personal and expert contribution is genuinely appreciated. We realize that you sacrificed more than a little to participate in the project. We can feel good about the memory of working together on such a worthwhile project. And we can recall the "good times" we had together.

Thanks again for sharing all of this with us.

Sincerely,

Robert W Blair
